Cabextract 1.18 or later Description: Cabextract is an open source utility for extracting files from Mac OS X application.cab and.app archives, typically generated by many macOS software packages, including Apple's official installer software.

Cabextract allows you to extract the files from Apple's installer.cab archive. There are two main reasons for the.cab file to be used instead of the traditional.zip archive. First, the.zip archive is in general quite heavy on the storage, especially if you happen to create a lot of small files. That's why you often need to pay for extra storage space, while a.cab archive has its own dedicated space inside the.dmg file it resides in. Second, the.zip archive often requires additional files to be present and installed along with the application. The Apple.cab archive is something different. It is the application installer itself, the installer contains all the files the user will need for running the app, including the files required by other applications to run properly. Unfortunately, at the time of this writing, the.cab files are not generated by the official installer. The.cab archive is generated by the terminal installer. HOW TO INSTALL Cabextract Cabextract requires an internet connection to be properly installed. Get the source code from: Copy the Cabextract folder to your desktop. Edit the UserDefaults to the username you wish to have the application run as. Cabextract (0.9.4) Requirements: Mac OS X 10.6 or later.
